ON NAVAL PARTY

Joint Suggestion Is Given
Hostile Reception in Geneva; Rising Tide of Resentment Is Seen.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—(AP)—British officials, in what some observers said was a significant and unexpected re-charting of Britain's course as host to the international naval conference, inaugurated separate two-nation discussions among the powers tonight, conferring with the Japanese delegation.

The surprise conference was held in the foreign office while members of the American delegation were in the country for a rest, and the French were week-ending in Paris.
Authoritative sources said the Americans were not informed of the development beforehand, and it was stated they were "unpleasantly surprised" when the news became known.

After the discussion between the British and Japanese officials, Japanese sources said the talk was "very frank, cordial and useful."
Previously Japan, despite challenges from 10 delegations, doggedly maintained her demand for fleet equality, defending her thesis that only in this manner will security for all nations be guaranteed.

First of Talks.
It was learned authoritatively in British circles tonight that the Japanese-British conference was meant to be the first of several between different delegations. No date, however, has been set for other similar talks.
The Japanese delegation, it was stated, expects to talk to the Americans early next week, possibly Monday or Tuesday.

British authorities asserted tonight that Great Britain does not plan to return to bilateral talks as in preliminary meetings last year among the naval powers.
These sources declared that the regular sessions of the conference will continue, with bi-lateral talks incidental and designed to facilitate the formal sessions.

At the two-power meeting tonight, were, for the British, Viscount Monell, first lord of the admiralty; Vice Admiral Sir Ernie Chiffinch, chief of naval staff; Vice Admiral William James; Robert Leslie Craigie, assistant secretary of the foreign office; Sir William W. Fisher, former Eddie Cantor's famous plea, "Drive carefully. We love our children," seems to have been disregarded by motorists last year, with 1,470 children under four years of age being killed outright in automobile accidents and 39,110 in the same age classification receiving painful and crippling injuries.

By the Associated Press.
The five-day-old Franco-British plan to end the Italo-Ethiopian war seemed headed for summary burial Friday night.

Stinging denunciations from Ethiopia, revolt in Geneva, London and Paris and misgivings even in Rome piled up against the proposals to give Benito Mussolini much of what he intends to seize from Emperor Haile Selassie by force of arms.

At Geneva, Ethiopia flatly rejected the proposal, declared its opposition to "all secret negotiations," and demanded that the League of Nations assembly be called in special session on the ground the Franco-British plan violates the spirit of the League covenant.

Publication of complete terms of the scheme drew such expressions in League circles as "simply terrible" and "worse than the peace forecast."

The Geneva reception was so hostile that the plan seemed certain to be killed unless it is considerably modified.

Rome Not Enthusiased.
Designed to give 11 Duce control or sovereignty over almost two-thirds of Ethiopia, the proposals, nevertheless, aroused no official enthusiasm in Rome.

Italy would get the eastern part of Tigre province; the Ogaden region of the south and rights of colonization and development in a vast and fertile region stretching across Ethiopia south of Addis Ababa.

The Negus Neghesti would get back his holy city of Aksum and adjacent territory in western Tigre province to form a connecting corridor with what was left of his kingdom.

He would receive a seat, probably Assab, as a way to get to it and a League of Nations commission to help him run his empire.

But fascists, looking at the map, wondered if the famous Rickett oil concession, for the eastern half of Ethiopia would not cut the props from under the biggest prize in the proffered zone of Italian influence, as aggressor.

ANNA WARE AWARDED 'GIFT OF GOD' BABY

St. Louis Court Upholds
Commissioner's Action
in Strange Case.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 13.—(AP)—The St. Louis court of appeals today upheld Special Commissioner Rush H. Limbaugh in his report that a "gift of God" baby claimed both by Anna Ware, unwed servant girl, and Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench, former society matron, was the child of Miss Ware.

The court did not order the immediate return of the baby boy to Miss Ware but decreed that the infant continue as a ward of the court until next Wednesday to allow Mrs. Muench, her physician husband, Dr. Ludwig O. Muench, and two other respondents time to file motions for a rehearing.

All exceptions and objections listed by the respondents last Wednesday to Limbaugh's report, made after conducting a habeas corpus hearing brought by Miss Ware for return of the child, were overruled.

In his findings, Limbaugh asserted that Mrs. Muench did not give birth to a child.

Limbaugh, in filing his report with the court December 5, recommended the child, now nearly four months old, be returned to Miss Ware. He decided the infant, claimed as her child by the 19-year-old Pennsylvania domestic and 44-year-old Mrs. Muench, "is the son of Anna Ware."

Miss Ware's baby was born here at the home of a midwife, last August 17.

Mrs. Muench announced the birth of a son August 18, terming it "a gift from God in my time of distress." At that time she faced kidnapping conspiracy charges, of which she subsequently was acquitted, in connection with the 1931 abduction here of Dr. Isaac D. Keller.

Limbaugh asserted she announced the birth to "gain sympathy from the jury trying her in the kidnapping case."

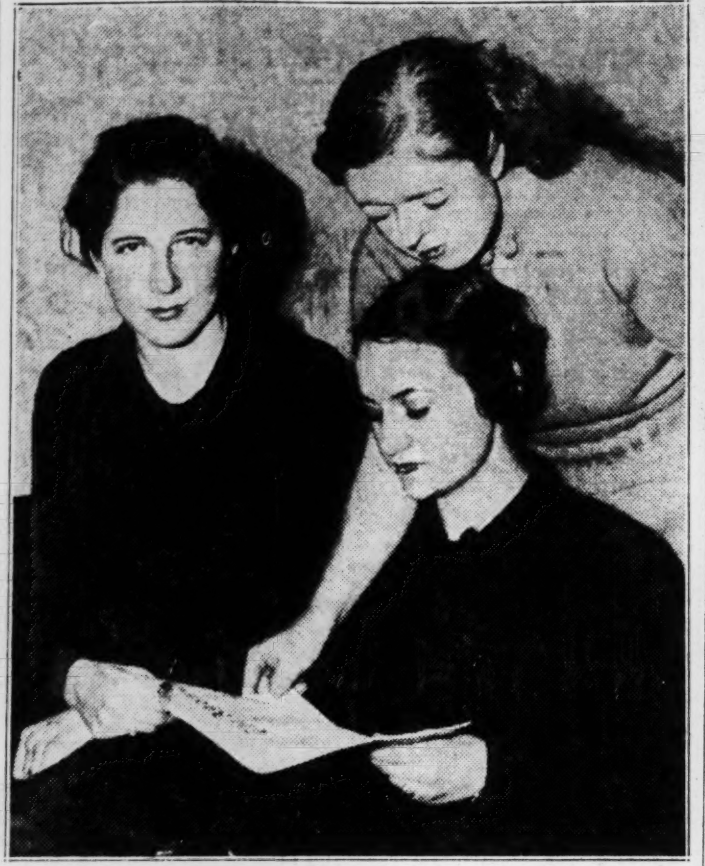

At the time of her announcement of the birth, Mrs. Muench had been childless through more than 20 years of married life.

Wilfred Jones, St. Louis attorney who arranged for the adoption of Miss Ware's child, and Mrs. Helen Berroyer, a friend of the Muenches, were accused by Limbaugh with conspiring with the Muenches to obtain the child.

Jones is under indictment for perjury in connection with his testimony at the habeas corpus hearing which ended early in November.

SUNSHINE CITY HAS CLOUDY '13TH'

Jinx Day Brings Gloom,
Spoiling Record Set in Florida Resort.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 13.—(AP)—This resort, widely known as "the sunshine city" tonight had thousands of brand-new converts to the theory that Friday the 13th is an unlucky date on the calendar.

For after 546 pleasant days, along came the national hoodoo day to shatter the city's boasted record for continuous sunshine, which tomorrow would have reached an even 18 months.

To every subscriber, and to all takers in the business and residential sections goes a free copy of the Evening Independent, which for 25 years has given away its entire issue every day the sun failed to shine before press time.

Today's free paper was the 117th since Publisher Lew B. Brown announced his "sunshine offer" in September, 1910, an average of less than five a year.

The Friday the 13th jinx succeeded where the tropical storm of last September failed, on both counts of the "old Sol" having come out brightly for brief periods.

There were many persons today who dispute the claim that the sun did not shine. By telephone and in person they told the Independent that the sky was clear, in spots, shortly after noon. But the newspaper's weather expert who, when the decision is close, races the "bridge" of the Independent building like a captain does quarter-deck of his ship, said the sun did not shine on him.

SOUTHERN RATE CUT IS REFUSED BY I. C. C.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—(AP)—The Interstate Commerce Commission today denied the application of railroads for authority to establish rates on carload shipments of machinery from southern territory points to official Illinois territory without observing long and short haul provisions.

The carriers asked permission to establish lower rates on such shipment from Chattanooga, Tenn.; Birmingham, Ala.; Columbus and Newnan, Ga.; and Knoxville, Tenn., to longer distant points in Illinois territory than for shorter distances over the same routes in southern territory.

Radio Operator Crushes Hand, Keeps on Job

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Dec. 13.—(AP) A plucky gentleman—Gordon Smith, 20, is a wireless operator of the tuna fishing boat San Lucas.

He sat at his transmitter for three hours after his right hand was crushed in refrigerating machinery yesterday aboard the ship, 250 miles at sea, and apologized:

"Excuse the bum sending. I just got my fingers taken off and I never sent with my left hand before."

Notified of the accident, a coast guard plane picked him up and Lieutenant L. C. Carlson, naval medical officer, amputated four fingers, without an anesthetic, aboard the plane.

At the airport a stretcher was in readiness.

"What's this for?" Smith asked. "I'm all right."

He walked to the ambulance, waiting to take him to a hospital, then quickly turned back to the plane.

"I've got to thank you," he told the fliers.

The weather bureau here predicted eight inches would fall and that it would snow throughout the night and probably tomorrow. Temperatures in the Buffalo area hung around freezing tonight.

Rochester reported four inches, Warsaw, Jamestown and Batavia the same.

GRAND JURY TO HEAR SPEAKERS ON MERGER

Proponents and Opponents
Will Appear Before
Body Next Week.

Fulton county grand jury next week slated to hear proponents of consolidation of Atlanta and Fulton county governments and a city manager form of government for the city.

Thomas Moyer, grand jury foreman, yesterday conferred with Mayor Key and asked him if he would consent to appear before the grand jury to discuss the seven-point merger program it invited. Key informed Moyer he would be glad to do so.

Councilman John A. White, city manager proponent, has been invited to appear before the grand jury at 1 o'clock next Wednesday afternoon. It was announced last night. White also will urge the grand jury to support the merger program.

White will ask the grand jury to consider both questions, inasmuch as they do not conflict," White said. "The merger matter is of prime importance and will come eventually. In the interim, we should provide as efficient a city government as is possible, and the city manager, to my mind, is the best means of effecting that."

Moyer and Key were closeted for about an hour during the morning in a general discussion of the merger program.

City council Monday is slated to pass a resolution asking the Fulton county democratic executive committee to put the seven-point merger program before the voters at the next election in the March, 1936, county primary. Key and others have insisted that an expression from the people be made on the proposed consolidation.

FAN MAIL WORRIES
TATTLING BARMAN

Curious Suggestions and Requests Sent to Male Crochet Expert.

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 13.—(AP) Harry Haberman, the tattling barmen who lifts a barrel of beer without batting an eye, took time out from his Christmas sewing today to answer fan mail.

It all started when the news was spread that Harry, a former star athlete, does fine needlework when not busy serving drinks at his bar in West Boylston, Mass., in Fresno, Cal.; Reading Pa.; McMinville, Ore.; Cleveland, Ohio, and Miami—and write to him.

A "young widow" in Arizona wanted Harry to live with her and her mother on their ranch, where all three could "crochet and knit in contentment."

Another letter offered Harry a chance to go into business, manufacturing a "crochet ball holder. His inventor had the patent; Harry the fame. Perhaps they could get together on a 50-50 basis, wrote the inventor.

"They call me up in the middle of the night to ask me about my needle work," said Harry. "Letters from all over the country ask for my patterns. They come to see me and get my autograph."

"They are running me ragged," he added. "If they don't stop pretty soon I'll have to get my Christmas presents or bedspread finished." Harry's bedspread is his pride. One-fourth done after two years of work, he estimates it will be worth $1,500 when completed.

NEW YORK PILOT WINS CURTISS TROPHY RACE

Ace Birdmen Battle Winds
To Thrill Thousands at Miami Air Show.

MUNICIPAL AIRPORT, MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 13.—(AP)—Engines roaring defiance to groundlings, master pilots braved perilous cross winds to bring thrills to thousands today at Miami's eighth annual All-American air maneuvers.

The birdmen battled gusts of 30 miles an hour or more that shook planes and made takeoffs and landings definitely dangerous as they swept over an unfamiliar course in two events at speed as high as 161,923 miles an hour.

Douglas Fonda, of New York, averaged that pace in the day's outstanding event, the Glenn H. Curtiss trophy race, for licensed planes of 550 cubic inch engine displacement.

Bunched closely at the start of the 15-mile, three-lap dash about improvised markers—the wind toppled two of three planes—five cabin ships started in the Curtiss trophy.

Fonda captured the lead at the first turn. On the back stretch R. O. Barker, of Wichita, Kan., like Fonda, flying a Beechcraft, swept to second place, but could not nose out the New Yorker.

Behind Fonda and Barker at the finish were Tex Lagrone, of Kansas City, Mo.; Lee Miles, of Cleveland, and H. L. Doyle, of Erie, Pa.

The pilots' unfamiliarity with the new course—hastily designated when the brisk wind prevented use of the regulation runway—resulted in considerable confusion aloft in the other competitive events, for C licensed planes of 550 cubic inches or less.

One plane, owned by E. C. Sundorff, of Cleveland, and piloted by Lee Miles of the same city, nosed over at the start when caught by gusts. Miles was uninjured, however, and the plane practically undamaged, though could not start in the event.

Four remaining planes were off, widely separated and the race resolved into an aerial duel between Doyle and Larry Cook, of Lakeland, Fla. The Floridian roared ahead at the finish to win.

Cook's average speed was 66,619 miles an hour; Doyle's 64,235. Wesley Raymond, of Lakeland, was third; Joe Musleh, of Jacksonville, fourth.

The day's show for the spectators was in the intricate cavorting of skilled acrobatic fliers, army, navy and civilian. Major Alford Williams, once one of the army's best aerial daredevils, demonstrated radio controlled acrobatics in one of these thrilling exhibitions.

LITHUANIA DEFAULTS ON DEBT PAYMENT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—(AP)—The Lithuanian government today became the second nation to default on the December 14 war debt payment to the United States.

Expressing regrets, the little Baltic country in a note sent to Secretary Hull through its legation here blamed its inability to pay the $776,319 installment on "continued adverse economic and financial conditions" in that country.

It gave the usual assurances of intention to open the question of a resumption of payments at a proper time. Lithuania has been in arrears since June 15, 1933.

The British government two days ago notified of its intention to default on its installment of more than half a billion dollars.

MRS. MINERVA WILSON PASSES AT AGE OF 105

Oldest American-Born Mother in Georgia Worked Until 75.

Mrs. Minerva S. Wilson, the oldest American-born mother in Georgia with a proven Revolutionary ancestry, died yesterday at her home on the Macon highway, near Hapeville, at the age of 105.

She was born August 7, 1830, at Hendrixville, Ala. Her parents were Mary Hall and Hugh Tatum, and among the first settlers of the region.

She was married at the age of 20 to William Hayes Wilson and became the mother of four children, all now dead. Left a widow when her children were still young, Mrs. Wilson secured employment in a cotton mill and raised her own children and 13 orphaned children of her daughter.

She continued her factory work until she was 75.

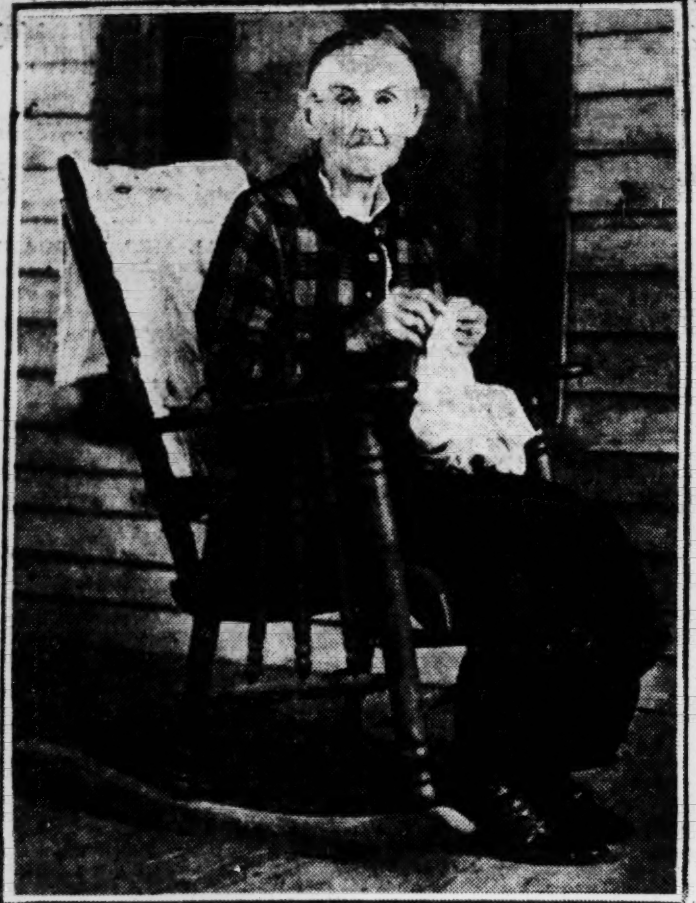

Both of Mrs. Wilson's grandfathers, Wheeler Tatum and Luther Hall, fought in the Revolutionary War. Mrs. Wilson lived seven miles from Kennesaw Mountain during the War Between the States and heard the explosion of the first cannon of the battle which took place on that mountain when, it is said, blood ran in small rivulets down its rocky sides.

Mrs. Wilson's grandfather, Tatum, lived to be 120 years old and is said to have predicted the War Between the States 50 years before its occurrence.

Until a short time before her death, Mrs. Wilson was active about the house, doing small tasks and refusing to remain idle.

She is survived by a number of grandchildren and great grandchildren. Funeral services will be held at 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the graveside in Woodstock cemetery with the Rev. W. M. Hart officiating. Howard L. Carmichael will be in charge.

Oldest American-Born 'Honor Mother' Dies

Mrs. Minerva Wilson, the oldest American-born mother in Georgia with a proven Revolutionary ancestry, died yesterday at her home on the Macon highway, near Hapeville, at the age of 105. She is shown here in a photograph taken on her 101st birthday anniversary, and which appeared in 1934 in The Constitution. She was selected as an "honor mother" at that time. to call an assembly session. The officials predicted, however, that the assembly meeting would be called if the council hesitates to reject the plan.

Ethiopia, it was believed, made a clever diplomatic move in attempting to throw the conflict into the assembly, where she hopes a majority of the nations will express disapproval of the plan and create a new atmosphere for sanctions.

The peace plan, Addis Ababa said, contains these proposals: 1—An act of aggression which is formally recognized as such by the League's council and assembly; 2—A strip connecting Eritrea with Italian Somaliland.

3—The Danakil or Aussa regions. 4—Any economic or political influence in Ethiopia outside the conceded areas.

Some unofficial sources gave much credit to Pope Pius for the Anglo-French proposal. The Vatican's skill and the power and prestige of its worldwide diplomatic network largely influenced decisions that might end the Ethiopian conflict, these persons said.

Speedy Reply Sought. The peace proposals were offered to 11 Duce with the expressed hope of a speedy reply. He was urged to accept them as a basis for a discussion, without prejudice to a final settlement.

It was suggested that the League of Nations committee of five handle the settlement.

11 Duce, showing no outward jubilation over what many believed to be a tremendous political victory, whipped up his fascists to sterner efforts to resist the League's economic siege and sent more troops to the front.

The fascist party, through widely circulated posters, told Italians what to expect. They must buy and pay. Formulating a balanced budget, the party told the people they could have 33 pounds of meat a year, each, without the necessity for importations.

New Diet. That, the fascists continued, was three times as much as is eaten in many regions where the populace enjoys good health.

The new diet is three-fourths spaghetti and the rest largely vegetable, preferably peas.

Cheese was proposed as an excellent substitute for meat, both as a diet and because it costs less.

War mothers and widows, it was announced, were engaged actively in house-to-house instruction of families in the "buy Italian" campaign. Price-watching committees and mayors were ordered to keep the cost of living down.

King Victor Emmanuel and his crown prince, Umberto, reviewed more troops destined for the African command of Marshal Pietro Badoglio who, it appeared, was digging in as if for a long war and preparing for a new advance soon.

FUTURE OF HOARE SHADOWED IN BRITAIN. LONDON, Dec. 13.—(P)—A parliamentary and public revolt against Great Britain's part in the African peace plan appeared to be growing to point of no return.

Publication of the official terms of the Anglo-French settlement disclosed in it went far beyond the pre-war proposals advanced to Premier Mussolini by a League of Nations committee of five.

The ordinary man feels Prime Minister Baldwin and his government betrayed him, the League, Ethiopia and the cause of peace, said Clement Attlee, leader of the labor party, in a speech at Bassettlaw.

Speculation on the political fate of Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary, who negotiated the plan with Premier Laval, of France, dominated discussion in parliamentary circles.

In the face of the fierce criticism, it was seriously suggested in some quarters that he has no alternative except to resign. Lobby gossip emphasized this would be more imperative if the League should reject the peace proposal, which is now anticipated in many London quarters.

Anthony Eden, minister for League affairs, it was disclosed, will return from Geneva for week-end negotiations with other cabinet ministers. Hoare, who is now on vacation in Switzerland, is expected to cut it short when foreign affairs are debated in the house of commons.

King George is keeping actively informed on developments. An emergency meeting of the cabinet may be held Monday.

LAVAL UNDER FIRE FOR PEACE EFFORTS. PARIS, Dec. 13.—(P)—Attacks upon Premier Laval for offering a prize to aggressor Italy broke out on the floor of the chamber of deputies today for the first time since the premier's peace agreement with Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign secretary.

Pierre Cot, former minister of air and a member of Edouard Herriot's radical socialist party, jumped up while the chamber of deputies was debating the budget to condemn the concessions to Premier Mussolini.

It would be a dangerous precedent, he said, if France some day becomes Germany's "Ethiopia."

"France must stand firm with the League for collective security," said Cot, who asserted he was speaking in the name of his party.

A communist attack followed Cot's. Gabriel Peri, red deputy, shouted that Laval "has sabotaged the League."

Noise was so great because of interruptions that the chair repeatedly demanded order.

Despite the opposition, a motion asking Laval to resume former negotiations was adopted by a large majority.

Dispute the opposition, a motion asking Laval to resume former negotiations was adopted by a large majority.

JAPANESE STAND FIRM ON PARITY PLEA

commander-in-chief of the Mediterranean fleet.

For the Japanese, Admiral Osami Nagano, Matsumoto Nagai, Captain Yasuhiro Iwasaki and Hidenari Terazaki.

Vice Admiral Chaffield, it was reported by reliable sources after the conference, explained the British opposition to Japanese demands for equality by expressing anxiety over the European situation, which he said needed a "very considerable portion of the British fleet in these waters."

Granting Japanese equality, he was reported to have said, would mean a British naval inferiority in the far east, where Great Britain has extremely important interests. This, he asserted, would be "an unacceptable situation."

In the general session today the delegation from Tokyo even extended the scope of its demands and admitted the right of all nations to have equal navies—including its rival in the orient, soviet Russia.

This maneuver was accepted by delegates as a bid for the support of France and Italy and it obviously pleased those delegations.

The British and Americans, however, stood solidly, shoulder to shoulder, in challenging the Japanese position. Both deemed it was wholly inconsistent with what the called Japan's lesser degree of responsibilities in the world.

Japanese Admittance. This failed to impress Tokyo's representatives, who met every argument with a counter-claim. One of what they called offensive navies would make every nation free from the menace of aggression, regardless of responsibilities, commitments, larger coastlines or vulnerability.

The delegations scattered to the country for a week-end of rest in "bathing" and "sight-seeing" and scope and size of the conference, which opened last Monday, will be narrowed to the heads of delegations in order to meet the requirements of the Japanese position, which even yet is not fully clarified.

Limiting of next week's discussions was suggested by the Japanese, who said they would favor separate talks with other nations but to be unwilling to suggest this yet.

The session today was reported to have been attended by Norman H. Davis, head of the American delegation, engaged in friendly but active debate with Admiral Nagano.

The Japanese always returned to their same position—equal fleets mean equal security to all.

Bitter Fight Anticipated in Drafting Of New Roosevelt Neutrality Act

President May Seek Discretionary Powers If Plans Are Adopted; Executive To Outline Policy Within Two Weeks.

By STANLEY P. RICHARDSON.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—(P)—Close on a presidential announcement that a new neutrality law will be sought early in the next congress a probability arose today that a major battle will result, if the administration seeks discretionary authority to administer it.

At the same time, the state department made public figures showing that exports of arms and ammunition between October 10 and November 30 to all non-embargoed countries totaled $1,335,196. France, which bought $335,196, was the largest customer for such materials in that period.

In asserting at his press conference that he would ask early for legislation to replace the existing neutrality law, which expires with February, President Roosevelt did not disclose what changes he would propose.

More Elastic Powers. It was known, however, that the state department, from its experience in enforcing the present act, favors the granting of more elastic powers to the President in the matter of imposing embargoes.

Senator Vandenberg, republican, Michigan, a member of both the foreign relations and munitions committees, as well as others influential in senate quarters already have sworn qualified opposition to such a proposal.

The present law makes it mandatory upon the President to embargo "standard" commodities of arms, ammunition and implements of war on the outbreak of hostilities. It makes no provision, however, for prohibiting exports of commodities not in these categories.

Secretary Hull recently said that it was not sufficient for America to "stand by complacently" after embargoing actual implements of war and watch a flow from this country to belligerents of materials from which they could fashion such implements.

Roosevelt Undecided. President Roosevelt said today he was undecided whether to refer to new legislation on the subject in his annual message to congress, but he indicated a decision probably would be made within the next two weeks on an outline to be transmitted to Capitol Hill.

Other proposals advanced by various quarters for new neutrality legislation include quota restrictions on the amount of munitions that can be exported to belligerents; a flat ban against American travel on ships of such countries; a prohibition against financial aid or price-fixing system.

the law has given him a new lease on life at least until early next year.

ARMY PILOT KILLED IN CAROLINA CRASH. PARRIS ISLAND, S. C., Dec. 13.—(P)—An army flyer identified as Major Arthur K. Ladd, of Langley Field, Va., was killed in a crash on the single-seater fighting plane near Dale, a hamlet of this (Beaufort) county today.

Major Ladd was flying to Miami where many army and civilian planes are participating in an air racing and exhibition event.

No witnesses were found who saw the actual crash, but residents of Dale said the flyer was apparently having engine trouble when he passed over there about midday.

The plane fell into a swamp and was badly damaged.

DR. SUTTON ADDRESSES
TEACHER ASSOCIATION

Strength of Government Depends on Educators, Superintendent Says.

Strength of the government economically, socially and politically will depend on teachers, Dr. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, told 250 members of the Atlanta Public School Teachers' Association, labor leaders and members of the board of education last night at a dinner which celebrated the 30th anniversary of the association and its 18th anniversary of national affiliations.

A. Steve Vance, president of the Georgia Federation of Teachers, said that "it has been teachers that have given us a stable, yet a progressive, government," the educator said.

"No body, anywhere, has an opinion of so color a world. The future will be what you and I put into the youth of the country."

Speaking on teachers and the future, he said by properly influencing the 30,000,000 school children of the nation, teachers could improve family life, solve problems of crime, increase appreciation of art and stabilize government.

Nance, speaking in behalf of the state federation of labor, with which the teachers' association is affiliated, said labor "has been and will continue to be in the fight of education."

Pointing out that personal independence comes only to those making reasonable salaries, he said teachers were obligated "to see that they themselves were well paid."

Ernest Brewer, president of the board of education; J. A. Harper, president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades; and J. W. Scott, past president of the American Federation of Teachers, and W. J. Scott, past president of the teachers' association, who told of the beginning and important legislation.

The case will test the right of the government to acquire transmission lines to convey surplus electric power to municipalities for sale in competition with private companies.

SCHOOLS OF GEORGIA
WILL GET $500,000Big Sum Will Be Paid Out
Before Christmas, Says
Superintendent Collins.

Expectations that more than half a million dollars will be paid to Georgia's public schools before Christmas were voiced yesterday by Dr. M. D. Collins, state school superintendent.

"By the end of this month we will have received from the state far more than in any other year in the history of common schools," he said. "At present we have received about $7,000,000."

Governor Talmadge recently announced the schools "can expect" as much money from the state in 1936 as they received this year, minus the $2,000,000 which was diverted to them from the highway department.

Dr. Collins would not comment directly on the announcement of Superintendent J. Harold Saxon, of Quitman, that a meeting has been planned for Monday in Camilla for discussion of what Saxon called "unjust" handling of school funds by Talmadge.

Dr. S. V. Sanford, chancellor of the University System and president of the Georgia Education Association, has said he has "no criticism" to make of the way the Governor has paid the schools and universities.

Dr. Collins said he expects a 10 per cent installment on the $4,564,000 appropriation for this year Monday. This will bring total payments on the appropriation to 80 per cent—the general departmental operating basis of all state departments this year.

He said an equalization fund check will be paid the department probably December 19 for about $200,000.

DIRECTORS NAMED
BY RESERVE BANKAlabama, Florida, Tennessee and Mississippi Bankers Are Elected.

Federal Reserve branch bank directors were named yesterday at a meeting of the board of directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta.

Frank M. Moody, president of the First National Bank of Tusculoosa, Ala., was elected director of the Birmingham branch.

W. R. McQuinn, president of the First National Bank of Jacksonville, Tenn., was named director of the Jacksonville branch.

C. W. Bailey, president of the First National Bank of Clarksville, Tenn., was elected director of the Nashville branch.

Herbert Holmes, active vice president of the Delta National Bank of Yazoo City, Miss., was named director of the New Orleans branch.

The new directors were named for a term of three years, taking office January 1.

SCHOOL HEAD HELD
LIABLE FOR MONIES

An opinion that county school superintendents and their bondsmen are responsible for official funds lost through closure of banks was given yesterday by the Georgia court of appeals.

This ruling was given in a case by which the Franklin county board of education was seeking to recover funds from County Superintendent J. W. Landrum and his bondsmen, the American Surety Company, of New York.

Landrum had deposited $4,957 in the Bank of Franklin, an official depository which later became insolvent. After liquidation a shortage of $2,181 remained and the board of education filed suit in superior court against the superintendent and his bondsmen. The court awarded a judgment to the board and the defendant appealed.

BIG CONTRACT LET FOR HEATING PLANT

A contract for erecting a $248,713 heating plant for the state hospital at Milledgeville was let by the State Board of Control yesterday to the Virginia Engineering Company, of Newport News, Va.

E. E. Lindsey, chairman of the board said installation will be started as soon as PWA approval is given the winning bid. The job will require seven to nine months, Lindsey said.

Replacing 22 boilers, the new plant is expected to save $30,000 per year in heating costs, Lindsey said. Concessions given by the Georgia Power Company, through which the board agreed not to install lighting plants at the state hospital and the sanitarium at Alto, are expected to save an additional $11,000, the chairman indicated.

Superstition, Narrow-Mindedness
Hamper Health Work, Session Told

Superstition and narrow-mindedness were described yesterday by Dr. J. E. Paullin, president of the Georgia Medical Association, as the heaviest stumbling blocks in way of public health.

Dr. Paullin's address on "The Practicing Physician and the Public Health" was a feature of yesterday's session of the Georgia Public Health Association in annual convention at the state capital.

"A large group of ignorant and uneducated as to medical and health problems still holds to many of the old superstitions such as carrying asafetida balls, brass rings and buckeyes to ward off disease," he said. "This group of individuals retards any program of public health."

"There is a prejudiced group who are narrow-minded and sometimes a great menace to the community. They have definite ideas of their own. They do not believe in contagious diseases."

He said more complete co-operation between practicing and public health physicians with better understanding by young doctors of public health problems, is advancing the relationship of preventive and curative medicine. He compared average family annual expenditures, including $150 for motor cars, $67 for tobacco, $34 for drinks, not including alcoholic beverages, and $24 for doctors' fees.

Dr. C. D. Bowdoin, chief of the division of epidemiology of the State Department of Public Health, led a discussion of epidemics in the state. Charts were used to demonstrate relationship of infectious disease death rates in counties served by public health officers and counties which have no health departments.

Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, director of the State Department of Public Health, spoke on work of his organization during the last year. The convention is to continue today.

CLOUDY AND WARMER
FORECAST FOR TODAY
Partly cloudy skies and a slight lift in temperatures are on the weather program for Atlanta today, according to George Minding, chief of the United States Weather Bureau here.

The mercury today will start at the 32-degree mark in the morning and rise gradually to 50 degrees during the day. Temperatures yesterday ranged between 38 and 47 degrees.

When the rainfall which swept the city had ended Thursday night, rain gauges here had recorded .76 of an inch in 24 hours. Farmers throughout the state welcomed the rainfall, weather officials said, as sowing of grain and planting of late vegetable crops had been delayed.

SMALL TOWN GIRL

BY BEN AMES WILLIAMS

WHAT HAS HAPPENED BEFORE: Kay Brannan, the younger of two sisters, lives at home in Carvel, a small town in New Hampshire. She anxiously awaits the graduation of her sister Emily, from college in order that she, herself, may be able to go the next year and thus escape the monotony of small town life. Kay is horrified at the thought that even her sister should waste her future in such a small town following graduation. Kay and her mother receive a letter from Emily in which she tells of having met a Dane Ripley. They suspect that Emily is in love with him inasmuch as she has invited him to visit them during the coming summer. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT VI. "His vacation begins July tenth," Emily explained. "He won't come before then, certainly. I'm going to ask mother to write and invite him, so he'll know we really want him."

But they were to be disappointed in this immediate expectation. Dane Ripley, the girl's suitor, was writing Emily that he was going abroad for a month. He explained: "I'm to check up on some points of design on the cathedrals over there. We're submitting sketches on the new cathedral of St. Martin here, and I'm doing some work on the job. I'm disappointed not to get up to New Hampshire, but I'll try to make it over Labor Day."

Kay, watching Emily, said in quick reassurance: "Don't be unhappy! Of course, he has to go; and you'll have it to look forward to, Emily." The other girl nodded, with shadowed eyes, and Kay predicted laughingly: "When you begin getting letters from Europe, Sue Clemons will be wild with curiosity. I hope he doesn't send postal cards, or whatever he says will be all over Carvel in no time." So she wooed Emily back to mirth again. But later Kay said indignantly to Mrs. Brannan:

"Just the same, he could have come up for a week-end, anyway. Emily counted on it so."

Mrs. Brannan answered quietly: "It's better not to take these things too seriously, Kay. New York is a long way from Carvel, you know."

Kay cried: "You mean, you don't think he... Oh, mother, Emily's wild about him. He must come! He just has to! I'll go get him myself, drag him up, here by the hair of his head..."

Her vehemence was amusing, and Mrs. Brannan smiled. But she said no more.

There were letters from Dane that summer. He wrote gaily; with a humorous pen; and they read his letters aloud and laughed over them. July passed, and August slipped away; and when they knew the day he would return, Emily sent a letter to await him in New York; and Kay asked her, after it was mailed:

"Did you tell him to be sure and come for Labor Day?"

"He will come, if he possibly can," Emily said confidently.

Kay nodded, watching her sister. She protested suddenly: "Emily, you're tired, working so hard on my things."

Emily smiled. "I'm not, in the least," she insisted; and she said, with apparent irrelevance: "I saw Mr. Hodges today."

Mr. Hodges was chairman of the school committee. Kay asked quickly: "Mr. Hodges? Why?"

"I'm going to take Miss Farmer's place this fall," Emily explained. "He says they're very glad to have me."

"Emily, you're not!" She cried. "Why, Emily, Dane will want you to..."

"Teach school?" Kay exclaimed. "It will make it so much easier for Father and Mother," Emily pointed out. "And I want you to have a good time at Wellesley, Kay. I don't want you to have to earn

"But you needn't worry, darling. Whatever I do, I'm certainly never going to marry George."

"Well," Kay insisted, "I know one thing. You can do as you like; but when I'm through college I'm certainly not going to come back here and just sit down and let moss grow all over me!" Then a deep tenderness for Emily welled up in her; she put her arms around the other girl. "Oh, I don't mean to be mean, darling! Just wait till Dane comes, and you'll see. Teach school? Ridiculous!"

But Dane Ripley did not come to Carvel that summer. "Work has piled up here, while I was abroad; and we're short handed. Sorry, Emily."

And he added: "Helen's looking forward to meeting your kid sister."

"Couldn't pass so near without saying 'hello.' He looked across broad lawns shaded by tall elms. "Say a peach to stop," said Kay.

any money there yourself. If I'm working, you..."

"You're not going to work!" Kay cried in a deep indignation. "I won't go to college at all, if it means that. Emily, I don't let you just come home and teach school like Lillian Radford, and settle down in Carvel, and never go anywhere, or do anything, Emily, you can do anything you want to, if you will. And besides," she insisted, "Dane won't let you, either!"

"Nonsense," Emily said, her cheeks warm. "I don't want to sit demurely at home and wait for Dane to come and marry me. Till he comes, I'll have to have something to do. Kay, I got in the habit of being busy, at college!"

Kay was bright with anger. "Emily Brannan," she protested, "you ought to be ashamed! What was the sense in going to college at all, if you're just going to teach school in a little dead town like this?"

Emily smiled. "Carvel's not so bad," she urged; and then honestly she admitted: "Of course, I—wouldn't want to think of living here for the rest of my life. There are so many things I want to do."

Kay cried: "You shan't do it, Emily! Mother was like you. She had plans and dreams and hopes, till she married Father, and then year after year she had to watch all her hopes wither and die. The first thing you know—Her tone was full of a tolerant contempt, "You'll be marrying George!"

"You sound as though that would be awful!" Emily commented, amused.

Tell Kay to look her up, at Wellesley, won't you?"

Kay heard this message with a stony eye. "I'll make a face at her," she declared. "I think he's a bum, Emily, not to come when you've counted on it."

But Emily said gently: "I haven't counted on it, Kay. I was afraid he—might not have time."

Kay put a brittle on her tongue; but later she spoke without restraint to her mother. "I'm so mad I could bite pieces out of things," she declared. "Emily's hurt and unhappy, and I don't want her ever to be hurt. Mother, she's such a peach! I'd like to tell him..."

Mrs. Brannan said gravely: "Be very careful what you tell him, Kay. Or his sister."

Kay nodded reluctantly. "I know," she agreed. "I know what you mean. Poor darling... Mother, I can't bear to think of her teaching school to help pay my way!"

"It will be a help," Mrs. Brannan confessed. "And she wouldn't be happy if she were idle."

"I'd rather not go to college than have her do that!"

"We want you to go, want to be proud of you there."

So when September came, Kay did depart. By Emily's advice she went alone. "You could go with you," Emily confessed. "But you'll find your own place more quickly alone, Kay. And—have a wonderful time, darling. You're four fine years ahead of you."

Kay took the train to Dexter. Through brimming eyes she watched these three folk on the platform outside her window, and tried to smile at them, and failed miserably. Then the train began to move, and they disappeared, and she saw the Weare, benign and beautiful, outside the window of the car, and she stared, unseeing for a while, and then dried her eyes, and spoke sternly to herself.

"Kay, you idiot, you ought to be just in raptures," she protested. "You've waited so long for this! And here you're crying, as if you were sorry to go!"

And she mustered her courage, faced the future with a determined smile.

Kay met Helen Ripley during the first month of college. She had been quick to make friends, for it was easy to like Kay and hard not to; and with a gift, and there are many ways in which they are alike. When she was established in her room—she would live this first year in the village where many of the Freshmen were housed—she had become a part of a group which was to cling together during the two years that followed. Marry Bingham, round as an apple, with bloom on her cheeks, was from Kansas and she had a pink perfection of good health which Kay approved delightedly.

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

A LITTLE SATURDAY TALK.

Christmas is now less than two weeks away, and I'm sure that many thousands of young readers are looking forward eagerly to the great feast day.

I am planning to give a series of stories next week on Old Christmas customs: taking up Feasting, Holly and Mistletoe, Yuletide Fires, Old Saint Nick and Christmas in Ireland.

It is natural for boys and girls to wonder what they will "get" for Christmas. In the minds of children, the day has come to seem chiefly a time when presents arrive.

One of my good wishes for you is that you should receive gifts which will give you joy and which will be helpful; but I also hope that Christmas will mean more to you than that.

The Christmas spirit, at its best, is one in which we think more of giving than receiving. Here is a question which each may ask himself:

"What persons would be made happy by receiving a Christmas gift or greeting from me?"

You may think of so many persons that you will not have enough money to buy presents or even Christmas cards, for all of them.

In that case you will need to cut down your list, or earn more money that you can use for presents, or make presents with your own hands.

Boys who have tool kits and work benches may be able to build something. Let us say a chair or a table for a small child. If you do that, remember that furniture for little children should have "round corners."

A saw, a wood file and sand paper can be used to turn almost any sort of a corner into one which is rounded. Some day I shall give reasons why it is well to have all corners on furniture rounded in homes where there are boys and girls less than six or seven years of age.

Girls may be able to sew or embroider something which can be used as a gift, and there are many other ways in which they, as well as boys, can add to the presents which they give away. In many cases, people who care for you would rather receive something you have made yourself than something you have bought at a store.

NEW DEAL OPPOSITION INCREASES IN POLL

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Further return in the Literary Digest nation-

The New Deal showed today an increasing majority of those balloting opposed the Roosevelt program.

With 642,711 votes tabulated from 16 states, there were 274,830 in favor and 367,881 opposed to the administration program. The percentages were 42.76 in favor and 57.24 in opposition.

The farm belt states of Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota—also Indiana, Ohio, Wisconsin and Michigan—were reported against the New Deal for a 3-to-2 ratio.

Seven southern states averaged 3-to-1 majorities in favor of the New Deal policies.

All of the states from which ballots have been reported so far, with the exception of Connecticut, voted for the New Deal.

The initial returns from Alabama are showing a 2-to-1 approval of the "acts and policies of the Roosevelt administration."

The balloting in Colorado is almost completed.

The eighth state from which initial returns are reported this week is West Virginia which votes 5,384 for the New Deal to 7,439 against it.

The 26 states from which returns are reported in the current tally represent over 63 per cent of the total population of the United States and the same states cast practically the same

Roger Likes Rabbit Pie Better Than Chicken Pie.

By FLORENCE La GANKE.

Roger came home from a hunting trip with three nice rabbits. He said he wanted rabbit pie, some rabbit with gravy, and he hoped he could have some hams and pepper. Louis said she wasn't sure about the last but she would make a rabbit pie for dinner that evening. She asked Roger to skin the rabbits, to split them and clean them. Then she cut one of the rabbits up as if for frittata. That is, Mrs. E. Schiller were they joined the body, split the back, and cut each side into two pieces. She put the rabbit to soak in an acidulated mixture made of one-quarter cup vinegar to every cup of water. The rabbit soaked for two hours. She drained it, wiped the pieces dry. She mixed one-half cup flour with two teaspoons salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, and dredged the meat through this mixture.

She put four tablespoons drippings or butter in a heavy frying pan and cooked the flour until it was browned. She put the meat in a baking dish. The contents of one can of condensed milk was added to the drippings in the frying pan, stirred well and then poured over the rabbit. She put two sliced onions and one dozen mushrooms in with the mixture. The casserole was covered and the rabbits baked for two hours in a 350-degree oven. At the end of that time she removed the cover and dropped spoonfuls of biscuit dough on top of the mixture. The temperature was increased to 375 degrees. The pie was baked for one-half hour. At the end of that time the crust was golden brown and the creamy mixture was bubbling and smelling good enough to eat.

Friendly Counsel

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD.
Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your name held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

A young wife and mother was all set up the other day over the impractical advice that comes to young marrieds from every quarter. She said: "It all reads well but so much of it is impractical. They tell us we should never attempt to live with our in-laws, that there is nothing but trouble to come out of it. We know it is not an ideal way to live but sometimes there isn't any other solution. We are told that a girl should never economize on baby shops but should have weekly prunings, pickings and polishings. What are we to do when we haven't a nickel left at the end of the week. We are warned that a wife mustn't give up nursing her husband when the babies come. When a wife does her own work, looks after an ailing child she hasn't time or strength left to nurse her husband. Where is the practical advice for couples like us?"

Wonder if the attitude of husband and wife to each other and toward their marriage isn't the most important item in their cooking account. Sue and Sam, Betty and Bob, Mary and Max have to do their own mixing according to what ingredients they have to use. Their mixture according to the steadiness of their hands and the clearness of their sight. Their attitudes toward one another and toward their marriage are the big factors in love's alchemy. If they enter matrimony resolved to treat one another as they did before they took the yoke, each resolved to treat the other's family as they did in courtship and resolved to look after their marriage as a union, not just a loose agreement, nothing can keep them from making a good mixture and filling their cup without spilling a precious drop.

The same thing is true in all human relationships between friends, between parent and child, between professional partners and business associates, the attitudes make the difference. The attitudes toward one another and toward their marriage are the big factors in love's alchemy. If they enter matrimony resolved to treat one another as they did before they took the yoke, each resolved to treat the other's family as they did in courtship and resolved to look after their marriage as a union, not just a loose agreement, nothing can keep them from making a good mixture and filling their cup without spilling a precious drop.

For instance, a few years ago a girl who was engaged to be married decided to go on a scouting visit to her fiancé's home. She hoped to discover if she could put over her marriage living with her fiancé's family. She stayed two weeks and they got on like a house on fire. Father, mother, brothers and sisters were cordially itself to her. Home she came to her parents and announced that she had no further fears. The fiancé's family had taken her to their hearts and she was sure she was making no mistake in moving in with them. A few months after their marriage he got cross-wise with one of her husband's sisters and, blood being thicker than water, the family threw her out. The fiancé's family became unbearable for all concerned.

She had visited that family before her marriage, treated them as hosts and hostesses, had in turn been treated as a member of the family. But when she went into the bosom of the family her whole attitude was different. The son was then her husband and she had no further fears. The fiancé's family had taken her to their hearts and she was sure she was making no mistake in moving in with them. A few months after their marriage he got cross-wise with one of her husband's sisters and, blood being thicker than water, the family threw her out. The fiancé's family became unbearable for all concerned.

Take the young husband who expects his wife to be a professional pamperer and entertainer. The baby who comes to interfere with his pleasure is as much his as hers. If he can't supply a nurse to help his wife with her duties, he must expect to sacrifice many of the things he'd like to do. Suppose he refuses to read the paper while she washes bottles, heats milk and quies a fretful little one; suppose he does have to give his wife a ride to the movies, his wife is bearing the real brunt of the baby. There is hardship and sacrifice for each, then but it is his duty toward these annoyances and inconveniences that settles the question of whether or not the two of them are more closely bound together or separated.

Everybody knows that the amount of money a couple may have (provided they are not poverty stricken) needn't affect their happiness one way or another, so long as they manage to make the income meet around the edges of the budget. There is just as much hazard in too much as there is in too little money. That's why Solomon cried: "Give man riches and he will not be content; and he will desire more riches." And he added that too much was likely to make a man defiant and too little likely to make him ashamed. Roger likes rabbit pie better than chicken pie. He doesn't mind a rabbit pie but he doesn't mind a chicken pie either. He doesn't mind a rabbit pie but he doesn't mind a chicken pie either. He doesn't mind a rabbit pie but he doesn't mind a chicken pie either.

Young people may be free from in-law complications, be financially independent, live in a nice home, have servants to wait on them and nurse the babies, wear fine clothes, ride in speedy cars and sit on the top of the social ladder, yet fail to make good mixture and end with an empty cup. They may live with in-laws and live without all the luxuries, do their own work, and still end with an empty cup to the brim. It is all in their attitudes.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

High Museum League Entertains at Dance

The High Museum Art League entertained at a Christmas dance last evening at the Knights of Columbus hall on Peachtree street, and featuring a floor show. The outstanding event of the evening was the surprise birthday celebration for Robert S. Rogers, instructor in the museum art school, who was presented with a gift and a cake suitably arrayed with candles. In the floor show were Misses Marie Kate Smith, vocalist; Tommy Green, pianist; Miss Julia Maxwell, Hawaiian dance; Tom McElmott, song and dance; Miss Joan Wells, "trucking"; and Misses Marveth and Evelyn Keyes, tap dance.

The holiday note which predominated in the decorations was carried out at the Christmas tree, which was a stand disguised as a snowbank and for a special Christmas number were appropriate caps and scarfs. A "snowball" no break further carried out the holiday note, when the young women attending pitched imitation snowballs, each bearing the name of the thrower, and the men catching the balls then sought out the partners thus designated for the no break dance which followed.

Culbertson on Contract

By ELY CULBERTSON,
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

(Mr. Culbertson continues his description of a "friendly game" he recently watched. The first hand in this series appeared Tuesday of this week.)

With a doubtful small slam to his credit, West decided to do some leading on North's hand. In return for the "riding" South had given him. "I don't hear any criticism of our contract on the last hand," he remarked. "What do you want us to do, cheer?" growled South. "Come on, deal the cards."

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

WEST EAST
♠ K J 10 8 5 4
♥ A 9 8 4
♦ A 10 8
♣ A 10 8
SOUTH
♠ 7 6 5 3
♥ K 10 8 6
♦ 9 5
♣ K J 9 4

The bidding:
South West North East
Pass 1spade Pass 2diamonds
Pass 4spades (final bid)

North, with his scattering of honor cards, felt that his best defense lay in not jeopardizing one of them on his opening lead, and therefore led the nine of diamonds. Dummy won the trick and now declared made the wrong play imaginable—he took a trump finesse. A moment's thought should have shown him the folly of this play. North's return lead, after winning with the queen, actually did show it to him. It was a diamond, removing West's only entry to the dummy's solid suit. Declarer tried to wiggle out of his blunder by leading another diamond and discarding his losing heart, but of course North ruffed and West later had to concede two club tricks for a penalty of 100 points. Obviously the proper play of the ace, king and jack of trumps would have brought home the contract with two overtricks.

For the first time East had something to say.
"If you'd stiffen your will power, partner," he remarked icily, "you might be able to resist a finesse now and then."

And South, hypocritically now, added: "Well, at least you reached the proper contract."
TODAY'S QUESTION.
Question: If a defender fails to follow suit, has the declarer the right to ask him whether he is out of the suit?
Answer: Yes. In certain cases it is much to declarer's advantage not to have a revoke occur (a long suit without entry might be lost) and he has the right to demand that a defender follow suit when he is sure that he is able to.

Miss Barton Complimented.

Miss Elizabeth Barton, whose marriage to James M. Springer will be "given" announced on December 20, was hostess at a bridge shower given by Miss Mary Singleton and Miss Helen Heaton at the home of Mrs. Ben R. Padgett, 1233 Peachtree street, on Saturday afternoon. An attractive plate was served, and on each plate a tiny red candle was burning, symbolic of the red camellias which were used in the decorations.

Invited were Misses Katherine Mathis, Cleo Pilkinton, of Atlanta; Vera Berwick, of Hapeville; of Tallapoosa; Beth Williams, of Quitman; Thyra Perry, of Macon; Helen Witt, Betty Spruiell, Mesdames Everett Collins, Blair Bell, W. H. Matthews, J. L. Stanton, J. I. McCallum, Ben R. Padgett, A. J. Floyd, of Rome; Charles Jackson, C. Wilmer Huff, Miss Heaton and Miss Singleton.

Barbara Bell Patterns

A SHOPPING DRESS! NICE LINE! GOOD DETAILS! Pattern No. 1658-B

If you think it is an easy matter to design a perfectly simple, wearable dress you are greatly mistaken. You won't just dash it off, it must be built from the ground up, as it were. Every line must be perfect, every detail must tell its own special little tale.

Now the dress illustrated is a pretty good example of simplicity raised to the nth degree of perfection. This dress is cut on the general lines of a coat dress, without the top to hem closing. The waist is cut in surplus fashion, with jabot-like revers to soften the lines. A panel extends from shoulders to hem both in front and back, and there are pleats that begin at the knees, so that there will be plenty of room for dancing about. The sleeves are long and fitted. A huge pocket trims the right side of the skirt, and it is finished with a simple tulle band.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1658-B is designed in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50. Size 36 requires 4 1/4 yards of 36-inch material.

Price of pattern 15 cents in coin. Do not send stamps.

Send for the fall and winter Barbara Bell Pattern book. Make your self attractive, practical and becoming clothes selecting designs from the one hundred and nineteen Barbara Bell well-planned, easy-to-make patterns. Interesting and exclusive fashions for little children and the difficult junior age; slenderizing, well-cut patterns for the mature figure; afternoon dresses for the most particular young women and matrons; and other patterns for special occasions are all to be found in the Barbara Bell pattern book. Send 15c today for your copy.
